ADDRESS OF JOHN BROWN

To the Virginia Court, when about to receive the

SENTENCE OF DEATH,

For his heroic attempt at Harper's Ferry, to

Give deliverance to the captives, and to let the oppressed go free.

10 167.

free Since. I intunded, certainly, to have made a | I have done no wrong, but must. I mover did intend murder, or trenson, or the destrus- LET IT BE DONE. tion of puperty, or to earlie or inche blaves to Let me my me word forther: I feel entirely robellion, or to make insurrection.

either father, mother, henther, sister, wife, or children, didea of that kind. or any of that close, and suffered and sacrificed what Lot use say searching, also, in regard to the

In "Benantice theme there in bound as bound with project pays stated. Note I have stops 1000 1000 thms. I endegvined to set my to that/instruction / //////

I have, may it please the Cenet, a few words | I say I am yet too young to understand that Gosin any supports of payment. I believe that to have In the first place, I deny every thing but what interfired as I have done, as I have always fively I have already admitted, of a design on my part to admitted I have done, in behalf of his design part, shows thing of that matter, as I did last winter, when Now, it' it is deemed necessary that I should I want into Missouri, and there took Slaves, without factors may life, for the fartherance of the ands of the sampling of a gun on either side, moving them "justice, and ments or arose common orm means through the country, and finally leaving them in it as an emprane, and with the blood of millions in Canada. I desired to have done the same thing this Slave country, whose rights are disregarded again, on a much larger scale. That our all I introdod. by wicked, cruel, and arjust enactments .-- I say, autisfied with the treatment I have received on my I have another objection, and that is, that it is trial. Considering all the diremmetances, it has been wood that I should suffer such a penalty. Had I more generous than I expected ; but I feel no soninterfered in the manner, and which I whult has acionsness of guilt. I have stated from the first what been fairly proved. -- for I whitler the truthfichness and was my intestion, and what was not. I mover had any caulor of the greater portion of the minasses who design against the fiberty of any povon, nor any dishave testified in this case,-bail I at interfered in position to commit treason, or excite Shaves to robel, hehalf of the Rich, the Powerful, the Intelligent, the or make any general hummrorian. I never enoune sp-called Great, or in behalf of any of their friends, agod any man to do so, but always discouraged any

I have in this interference, if world have here all right, statements made by some of those who were com-Every man in this Court would have doesned it an inceted with me. I hear that it has been stated by art worthy a reward, rather than a punishment, some of times, that I have induced them to jun me ; This Court acknowledges too, as I suppose, the but the contrary is true. I do not say this is injust validity of the LAW or Goo. I saw a book kneed, them, but as regarding their weakness. Not one but which I suppose to be the Benz, or at least the joined are of his own accord, and the greater part New Travanner, which teaches me that, "All things | at their own expanse. A number of them I never whatsoever I would that men should do to mu, I saw and never had a word of environmention with, till should de-gyra op to them." It touches no further, the day they cause to me, and that was no the pur-

1 Mr. Starter, many hearter designs of had something to any story statement whethis and hit assuments meanwhile, it a cose, Million when paged (1)

John Prown

Address of John Brown to the Virginia Court, when about to receive the sentence of death, for his heroic attempt at Harper's Ferry...

Boston, Massachusetts, circa December, 1859.

Broadside, 1 page.

ADDRESS OF JOHN BROWN

To the Virginia Court, when about to receive the

SENTENCE OF DEATH,

For his heroic attempt at Harper's Ferry, to

Give deliverance to the captives, and to let the oppressed go free.

[MR. BROWN, upon inquiry whether he had anything to say why sentences should not be pronounced upon him, in a clear, distinct voice, replied:]

I have, may it please the Court, a few words to say.

In the first place, I deny every thing but what I have already admitted, of a design on my part to free Slaves. I intended, certainly, to have made a clean thing of that matter, as I did last winter, when I went into Missouri, and there took Slaves, without the snapping of a gun on either side, moving them through the country, and finally leaving them in Canada. I desired to have done the same thing again, on a much larger scale. That was all I intended. I never did intend murder, or treason, or the destruction of property, or to excite or incite Slaves to rebellion, or to make insurrection.

I have another objection, and that is, that it is unjust that I should suffer such a penalty. Had I interfered in the manner, and which I admit has been fairly proved, – for I admire the truthfulness and candor of the greater portion of the witnesses who have testified in this case, – had I so interfered in behalf of the Rich, the Powerful, the Intelligent, the so–called Great, or in behalf of any of their friends, either father, mother, brother, sister, wife, or children, or any of that class, and suffered and sacrificed what I have in this interference, it would have been all right. Every man in this Court would have deemed it an act worthy a reward, rather than a punishment.

This Court acknowledges too, as I suppose, the validity of the LAW OF GOD. I saw a book kissed, which I suppose to be the BIBLE, or at least the NEW TESTAMENT, which teaches me that, "All things whatsoever I would that men should do to me, I should do even so to them." It teaches me further, to "Remember them that are in bonds, as bound with them." I endeavored to act up to that instruction. I say I am yet too young to understand that GOD is any respecter of persons. I believe that to have interfered as I have done, as I have always freely admitted I have done, in behalf of his despised poor, I have done no wrong, but RIGHT.

Now, if it is deemed necessary that I should forfeit my life, for the furtherance of the ends of justice, and MINGLE MY BLOOD FURTHER WITH THE BLOOD OF MY CHILDREN, and with the blood of millions in this Slave country, whose rights are disregarded by wicked, cruel, and unjust enactments, – I say; LET IT BE DONE.

Let me say one word further: I feel entirely satisfied with the treatment I have received on my trial. Considering all the circumstances, it has been more generous than I expected; but I feel no consciousness of guilt. I have stated from the first what was my intention, and what was not. I never had any design against the liberty of any person, nor any disposition to commit treason, or excite Slaves to rebel, or make any general insurrection. I never encouraged any man to do so, but always discouraged any idea of that kind.

Let me say something, also, in regard to the statements made by some of those who were connected with me. I hear that it has been stated by some of them, that I have induced them to join me; but the contrary is true. I do not say this to injure them, but as regarding their weakness. Not one but joined me of his own accord, and the greater part at their own expense. A number of them I never saw and never had a word of conversation with, till the day they came to me, and that was for the purpose I have stated. Now I have done. –

John Brown

Notes: Printed by C.C. Mead.